Nobody was hurt, but a Monday-afternoon fire caused extensive damage to a house on Waverley Street. Fire crews believe it started on the house's second floor before spreading to the third floor and attic.

When firefighters responded to the 1:45 p.m. call, heavy flames could be seen coming from the second floor windows.

They conducted a search of the residence and confirmed nobody was home.

Both occupants of the house were later contacted at work.

The blaze caused an estimated $650,000, and the cause of the fire is currently under investigation.

Residents escape blaze in highrise

The unlucky 13th floor of a highrise on Cedarwood Drive was charred by a suspicious fire Sunday night, but luckily no one was hurt.

Resident Gloria Belair spent a half-hour Sunday night trapped on her balcony waiting to be rescued as fire raged outside her door, but she still feels fortunate.

"I know I'm lucky," she said. "Even with the bad luck, I'm lucky."

Belair was one of a handful of residents evacuated from 2850 Cedarwood Drive Sunday evening after a fire broke out in the hallway on her floor a little after 7 p.m.

The Ottawa police arson unit is investigating.

Friends arrange benefit for family left homeless by fire

- Woman's boyfriend rescued cat from basement days after fire
- City set up temporary home for displaced family at Extended Stay

JOE LOFARO
@METRONEWS.CA

The number of donations that Carmen Mayer has received since her townhouse on Downpatrick Road was destroyed by last Tuesday's fire is virtually endless.

From a new bed and a Nintendo DS for her eight-year-old daughter, Madison Moreno-Mayer, to an iPad, clothes, toiletries and cash, the generosity from friends and even strangers has been overwhelming, Mayer said.

She lost almost everything in the fire, which was started by an oil candle, and wasn't insured.

"Never in my life did I ever think that people were good like this," said Mayer, 29. "For someone to be so selfless, I never imagined it."

A box that contained family keepsakes managed to survive the fire. Mayer's friend Julie Dodd had given it to her at a baby shower.

But it was the loss of Bella, her toy poodle-Yorkie, that was most devastating.

The box that held keepsakes will now serve as Bella's final resting place.

The Lord Elgin Hotel put her up for free over the weekend. She has since moved to another

And Mayer's friends from high school have organized a benefit at the Royal Oak, at 800 Hunt Club Rd., for Saturday at 2 p.m.

"It was pretty sad to hear about it all, and we just wanted to help her out," Dodd said.

A donation table will be set up, and bands will perform. For more information on the benefit, go to on.fb.me/xxvCur.

There is no identified link between the infection-control lapse at a Carling Avenue clinic and cases of hepatitis B and C, or human immunodeficiency virus, says a report released Monday by Ottawa Public Health.

The report says that 90 per cent of about 7,000 patients who underwent endoscopies by Dr. Christiane Farazli are aware of the lapse that was identified in May.

Of the 4,353 blood tests so far, 369 showed evidence of hepatitis B, and 39 showed evidence of hepatitis C, but there are no cases of serious illness. The report will be posted at Ottawa.ca.

Jays: We'd love an Ottawa team

► Montreal, Halifax the next stops on Jays' Winter Tour ► Fans from outside Toronto get change to meet players

@METRONEWS.CA

Toronto Blue Jays players in town for the annual Winter Tour say they'd be happy if their AA farm team moved to Ottawa.

"It would be cool because, for me, coming up, I never got to Canada to play until we got to the big leagues," said Jays catcher J.P. Arencibia, who hails from Florida. "So it would be kind of cool to give the (young players) a taste of the culture."

Ottawa city staff are planning to present councillors with the results of a bid process on a new lease for the Ottawa Stadium early this year, and U.S. firm Beacon Sports Capital Partners is interested in making that team

"Any kind of team here would succeed, because there's a lot of pride in Canadians. And if they had a team they'd support them."

an AA franchise.

There has been much hope and speculation, but no promises, that if an AA team comes to town, it could be affiliated with the Jays.

"Someone was kind of whispering about it at the signing, that there was talk about it," said pitcher Casey Janssen, who was signing autographs at the St. Laurent Mall on Sunday. "As long as you can continue to bring baseball to Canada, spread the game. Hopefully a little kid can attach on to something, that's what it's all about."

"If it's a farm team for the Blue Jays, it's even better," added pitcher Ricky Romero. "You're kind of getting that culture in and more fans start latching onto our team. Families can go. It would definitely be very cool, I think."

Manager John Farrell said he's "not privy to any conversations that might be going currently to lure a club here," but there would be "many positives" to having a Jays farm team in Ottawa.

"Any time that a fan-base can follow young players through a system and ultimately to the team they support at the major-league level — those are all positives," he said.

Accused mom testifies at Shafia trial

► Tooba Yahya is facing trial in a case prosecutors allege was a so-called honour killing

A woman accused of killing her three daughters and her husband's other wife testified in her own defence Monday in Kingston, Ont.

Tooba Yahya, 42, is on trial for murder along with her husband, Mohammad Shafia, and their son. Collectively they are accused of killing their four female relatives over family honour, pushing them into a canal in a car and drowning them.

Shafia sisters, Zainab, 19, Sahar, 17, and Geeti, 13, along with Rona Amir Mohammad, 52, Shafia's other wife in a polygamous marriage, were found in a car at the bottom of a canal in Kingston on June 30, 2009, when the Montreal family was heading home after a trip to Niagara Falls, Ont.

Yahya broke down in tears when describing how upset Mohammad was at not being able to conceive — the reason Shafia took a second wife — and how Yahya essentially gave Sahar to her to raise as her own daughter.

‘Why, Oscar?’ mom asks

► Hundreds of people attend funeral of Canadian who died in police custody while visiting Grenada ► Five officers charged with manslaughter

A Toronto man allegedly beaten to death by police in Grenada was remembered Monday as larger than life.

Grenada's prime minister was among the attendees at a funeral for Toronto resident Oscar Bartholomew.

The 39-year-old died in police custody after his arrest on Boxing Day.

The death of Bartholomew, who was visiting his homeland over Christmas, has evoked outrage and sympathy.

As a result, his funeral in the hamlet of Crochu has garnered widespread attention throughout the tiny country.

Dolette Cyr Bartholomew, his wife of 10 years, sat stoically in the church with her daughter Melanie, who brushed away tears during the service.

Father Anthony Marfo Dwomo spoke of forgiveness during his homily while others remembered Bartholomew as a man who was larger than life and loved his family.

Roslyn Charles, a friend from Toronto, recalled Bartholomew as "quiet" and hard-working.

"I've never seen this guy in any trouble," Charles said.

Earlier, Bartholomew's mother Andrianne had to be restrained by relatives at his open casket as she wept, "Why, Oscar?"

Bartholomew's death has also highlighted claims from those who say Grenada suffers from a systemic problem with poorly trained and poorly disciplined police.

Monday, some relatives erupted in anger as uniformed police, outside to keep order during the funeral, went into the church. The officers were forced to leave.

Business expectations hit low point: Survey

► For first time in almost 3 years, firms expect sales to slow over next year ► But plans to hire have increased

Canadian businesses are becoming more pessimistic about the economy and their future prospects for sales both at home and in foreign markets, the Bank of Canada said Monday.

The central bank's survey of senior management at 100 representative firms shows confidence is well off post-recession highs across the broad spectrum of issues — from sales expectations to investment and hiring intentions, to their ability to pass through their costs to customers.

It is difficult to say whether business executives are the most pessimistic since the recession because the question posed is relative to the past year, but the central bank notes the result suggests firms are more worried about selling their products into the softening demand globally and domestically.

In the survey, 41 per cent said they expected their sales pace to slow, as opposed to 37 per cent that expect an increase. The rest were neutral.

"Overall, the weak U.S. economic outlook, concerns about adverse effects from the situation in Europe and an expected slowing in household spending were among the factors dampening sales

IN DEFENCE OF STAYING IN

SHE SAYS ...

JESSICA NAPIER

bare calendar feels like the ultimate luxury.

While the gloomy stretch between the holidays and spring is an ideal time to be anti-social (read: broke and lazy), there are still plenty of people who will try and coerce you out of your sweatpants and into a taxi headed for a night out on the town.

Sure, a cocktail can be nice, and every good Canadian girl knows how to navigate icy sidewalks and snow banks in her least sensible heels, but as the temperature dips, the idea of going to a club or a bar or anywhere that isn't your own living room becomes less and less appealing.

I think we should stop trying so hard to have fun and embrace these precious weeks of guilt-free hibernation while they last. I mean, do you really want to risk hypothermia just to spend another Saturday night covered in spilled drinks and other people's sweat, elbowing your way across a crowded dance floor and wondering, "Am I having fun yet?"

This winter, I've decided that staying in is the new going out. Instead of whining about frostbitten exposed limbs and overpriced mixed drinks, can we all agree to just stay indoors for the next few months?

Now, before you dismiss me as a friendless shut-in, give the idea of becoming a winter hermit a chance. Think of all the money you'll save, the calories you won't consume, the clothes that will go un-ruined! A few months of self-imposed house arrest will do wonders for your wallet, waistline and probably your mental health.

You'll host board-game nights, learn how to cook your own meals, sort out your underwear drawer, actually read all those books you so proudly display on your coffee table and go to bed at a reasonable hour. If you're lucky, you'll have a fireplace and all of these indoor activities will seem 1,000 times better because of it.

Ultimately, all any winter hermit really needs is a few bottles of red wine and a subscription to Netflix. Perhaps if you're feeling really ambitious, you'll invite some low-key companions over to share that aforementioned wine and discuss how you actually don't miss going places and doing things at all.

Buried under a blanket of snow

Alaska town calls state for help

A house is buried in snow in the fishing town of Cordova, Ala., in this Jan. 7 photo.

Residents have turned to the state to help them dig out of massive snow levels that have collapsed roofs, triggered avalanches and even covered doors, trapping some people in their homes. Cordova is used to snow, but not like this. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Heavy, wet snow threatens homes

Officials said at least three buildings have collapsed or partially collapsed, and six homes are deemed severely stressed by heavy, wet snow.

The city has set up a shelter at a local recreation centre, but said people leaving homes in avalanche-risky areas have been staying with other residents.

Writer captures Maggie's mettle

► Screenwriter Abi Morgan ruffles feathers for her portrayal of Margaret Thatcher in the Iron Lady ► Says the film is a study of power and loss

► Screenwriter Abi Morgan says that Meryl Streep as Margaret Thatcher is 'absolutely dream casting.'

RICHARD CROUSE
SCENE@METRONews.ca

Margaret Thatcher, the longest reigning British Prime Minister of the 20th Century, remains a polarizing figure even though she hasn't held office since 1990.

She is now the subject of The Iron Lady — a nickname Thatcher picked up from Soviet newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda — a biography starring Meryl Streep, written by Shame playwright Abi Morgan.

The film has already ruffled the feathers of Thatcher devotees. Tim Bell, a longtime associate of the former PM, called the movie a "non-event" and Tory loyalist Norman Tebbit commented that Thatcher was "never, in my experience, the half-hysterical, over-emotional, over-acting woman portrayed by Meryl Streep."

"It's not a documentary, it's not a social history, it's a drama," says Morgan on the controversy. "I think if you see yourself as an artist, part of being an artist is to comment on your times. I feel it is a comment but it is a creative comment."

"I hope it's a humane and dignified portrayal. I think anybody can see it's not an attempt to sabotage."

"I feel it is as much the study of power, the study of loss and the study of the isolation of office and [because] Margaret Thatcher is an icon, a recognizable public figure, she was a way to filter those very powerful themes."

As written, the character of Thatcher is complex. The film first shows her long after her glory days and works backwards through her career highlights.

Meryl Streep plays her in various stages of her career.

"She is absolutely dream casting," says Morgan.

"There are, obviously, amazing British actors and one would have been lucky to work with any of them, but what was exciting to me about working with Meryl is that she's a complete shape shifter."

"I think she is an absolutely fascinating actress and I felt incredibly reassured when I learned Meryl was going to play the part because I knew she would imbue that character with such humanity and such complexity."

How Phyllida Lloyd softened an Iron Lady

Considering the historical and controversial stature of Margaret Thatcher's 11-year run as the U.K.'s prime minister, it's surprising there hasn't been a major motion picture about her until now. But director Phyllida Lloyd is happy to get there first. Choosing to focus on the Thatcher of today, with her political career shown in flashback, Lloyd offers a softer, more sympathetic depiction of a woman still reviled by many.

Why do you think there hasn't been a film exclusively about Thatcher until now?

It is surprising. This movie's been a long time in development, and it began as a film about the Falklands War, and then [screenwriter] Abi [Morgan] came onboard and dropped this bombshell and said, "What about setting it in the present?"

Was the focus on her as an older woman part of an attempt to make her more sympathetic?

In England, she's still one of the most divisive characters, and the debate about her policies and her legacy is really being largely stuck.... We talked about it very much as a sort of King Lear for girls. It was a story of a mighty leader who was brought down partly by the enemy within and also by their own kind of hubris.

Cakes over cankles for Jillian Michaels

► Personal trainer leaves The Doctors over difference of opinions

THE WORD

DOROTHY ROBINSON
SCENE@METRONWS.CA

Jillian Michaels, the trainer we would least like to cross paths with in a dark alley, made a splash when she joined the hit syndicated show The Doctors this year as a co-host.

But, last week, after only half the season, she left the show. The split, she told Metro, had to do with cankles.

"It was like the relationship that looks perfect on paper and when you got there it just was all wrong," she told us over the phone.

"They wanted me to do segments on cankles and I wanted to do segments on food desserts. I wanted to do exposés on how prisoners have better food than our children at public schools. It wasn't anybody's fault, it really wasn't. There's no hard feelings."

Michaels said she called one of the producers she was close to in order to end things.

"I said, 'Listen, I know that this isn't working for you guys, because you know I'm not happy and I don't feel happy doing it, and my fans don't like me doing it and your fans don't like me doing what I wanna do, and you know let's just walk away amicably.'"

The faces of cancer

► Photo exhibit travelling across Canada to show exactly who prostate cancer has affected

CELIA MILNE
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

Who gets prostate cancer? What do they look like? A new photo exhibit takes us into the inner world of this disease, showing us the fear, sadness, love, loss and hope that survivors and their families feel.

Prostate cancer got personal recently when 246,000 Canadians participated in Movember to raise money and awareness about the disease. Today, a photo exhibit called TIED Together begins in Toronto before going across Canada.

"The images illustrate the faces of prostate cancer — men of all ages and races and their families. It communicates that prostate cancer doesn't just affect the man, but the whole family," says Rebecca von Goetz, executive vice president of Prostate Cancer Canada (PCC) in Toronto.

The exhibit was created by PCC in partnership with PhotoSensitive, an organization that calls attention — through black-and-white photography — to social issues such as AIDS, First Nations literacy and natural disasters.

TIED Together includes more than 100 images and 10 video interviews with cancer survivors and their loved ones.

Included in the exhibit are pictures of Jack Layton, Pierre Trudeau and Alex Baumann.

The exhibit will show at Brookfield Place in Toronto from Jan. 10 to 21. PCC is looking at future showings in Vancouver, Calgary, Edmonton, Winnipeg and Ottawa.

"As devastating a disease as it is, the images show hope and the strength that these survivors have to continue to enjoy life, despite its challenges," says von Goetz.

I ordered the Tikka Kabob. The beef was tasty and moist with a nice balance of seasoning. The chunks of beef were sitting on a generous mound of scented basmati rice. On the side, the naan bread was pleasantly crispy and served warm. Fresh lettuce, cucumber and chunks of tomato drizzled with a creamy dressing framed the plate.

For dessert, I tasted firnee, which is a soothing dessert custard. Topped

AN EPIC $10K FALL

FUN AND FRUGAL

LESLEY SCORGIE
MONEY@METRONEWS.CA

Last September I was hiking in St. John's, NL. While gawking at the ocean, I neglected to watch where my feet were headed and fell flat on my face. My fall resulted in whiplash, a concussion, a displaced jaw, scrapes and bruises. Since then, I've been seeking treatment from a slew of doctors, dentists, physiotherapists, chiropractors and massage therapists.

My road to recovery will take around one year and cost $10,000. Unfortunately, like many Canadians, my medical insurance is limited and unlikely to cover even 25 per cent of my expenses. So, I'm now on the hook for a series of bills I wasn't expecting. My injury is a classic example of why it is important to have emergency funds.

Experts recommend that every household has three months of salary tucked away in case of an emergency. This is a lot of money! To make saving less painful, build this fund over time through automatic contributions to a savings plan that earns interest.

Start by setting aside three to five per cent of your income; then increase it to six of or seven per cent when you're ready. Once you reach your savings goal, you can stop contributing.

Reduce the temptation to spend this cash by keeping the money somewhat accessible, but removed from your day-to-day spending. Consider putting it in a low-risk money market mutual fund, a GIC, or a high-interest savings account. Hopefully you'll never experience an emergency. But, if you do, you'll be prepared.

Rethink those RRSPs

ON MONEY

ALISON GRIFFITHS
MONEY@METRONEWS.CA

This is the time of year when you tell yourself to save more and contribute more to your RRSP.

Yes to the first one but the second, perhaps not.

Certainly Canadians need to save more than the current rate of four per cent of income. However, the default destination for those savings, an RRSP, isn't necessarily the right one.

Anyone who is likely to qualify for the Guaranteed Income Supplement (GIS) after age 65 is better off with a non-registered investment account or a Tax Free Savings Account (TFSA). Mandatory RRIF withdrawals could result in a reduced or eliminated GIS.

Retirement ready?

- 96% of tax filers were eligible to contribute to RRSPs in 2010.
- 26% of tax filers contributed to RRSPs in 2010.

GIS eligibility is reduced as net income rises and disappears entirely at about $16,000 for singles and $21,500 for couples (Old Age Security does not count as income).

At the other end of the scale, those likely to have significant incomes after retirement from a combination of pensions, non-registered investments and other income could face not only a high post-retirement tax rate, but claw back of OAS and a reduction in their personal exemption.

The latter is not well known and can be a considerable shock. Though OAS claw back doesn't kick in until a net income of around $68,000, the age amount tax credit for those 65 and over will be reduced once net income reaches roughly $33,000.

► Alison's money rule: Sometimes there are better ways to save for retirement than through RRSPs.

TFSA's are great alternatives for those wanting to save outside an RRSP. However, you can only deposit $5,000 annually. Another alternative are non-registered investment accounts, though you will pay tax on income or capital gains.

A final "savings" alternative is to pay down debt.

Even though your interest costs may be low, every dollar you put on debt is a form of savings.

And last week I included details of a contest to win a one-on-one consultation with me. Unfortunately the link was not live. But it is now at my website, alisongriffiths.ca.

Debt control: How low can you go?

The first step to lowering your debt is admitting you have a problem. If you answer yes to any of these five questions, managing debt may be an issue in your life:

- Do you frequently pay your bills after their due date?
- Do you advance money from one credit card to pay off another one?
- Do you ask to borrow money from friends or family to pay your bills?

- Have you had your utilities cut off?
- Have you thought about getting a second job just to pay the bills?

Start the new year off on fresh footing and vow to get out of debt. Consider these four tips from Industry Canada:

- Set a limit for your spending and stick with it. This is easier said than done, however. Industry Canada has links to some great online ► Make a plan to get out of debt this year.

budgeting tools such as Take Charge of Your Debts at ic.gc.ca/debt.

- Get credit counselling. A budget advisor or credit counsellor will help you establish a realistic plan for managing your money. Many community and consumer organizations offer these services for free or for a small fee.

- Think outside the box. Examine your expenses — both big and small. Can you skip the expensive foreign vacation you take every year? Are there small but regular expenses you could cut that could make a big difference over time, such as packing a sandwich rather than buying a lunch?

- Consider consolidating your debts. Contact your creditors or financial institution about pooling your debts to lower your interest rate. Then you'll have one payment at the same interest rate versus many at varying rates. NEWS CANADA

THE WORLD CAN BE A RUDE PLACE

Good day. I had to write in about adult manners. While my husband was parking our car over by Tags MicMac Mall, myself and youngest grandchild was waiting for him by the entrance of Winners. My grandchild held the door open for about 100 adults and maybe five said thank you. The rest walked by and didn't even look at her. How do I explain this to my grandchild?

I love your email, thank you!

I'm certainly not trying to make excuses for those people who did not say thank you, but it was five days before Christmas and I'm sure those shoppers were preoccupied with their Christmas shopping in a busy mall.

Some people say that when someone doesn't say thank you, you should say back in a loud stern voice 'you're welcome!' to make them aware of their mistake.

I understand why people want to do that, however I do not advise this because pointing out people's social mistakes publicly is not polite nor the gracious thing to do on your part — two wrongs don't make a right. But I do hear your frustration loud and clear. I promise I'm listening.

So what to tell your granddaughter? Well, the truth is first teaching her to always be polite and say thank you herself (I'm sure you have already done that).

Second, tell her the truth that some people in this world are rude and don't say thank you. This is going to happen to her in life and she has two choices: stop being polite all together or just let it go. Finally, know that, generally, when people are rude such as in these circumstances, they are not trying to purposely hurt her feelings, they just don't know any better.

Ultimately, I believe teaching her to be the example is the right thing to do.

A 'front row seat' to history

► Ex-coach of Tiger Woods writes about their time together

Hank Haney has written a book about the six years he spent as Tiger Woods' swing coach, a volatile time in which Woods went from winning nearly half of his tournaments to a scandal that derailed his pursuit of golf history.

"I get asked all the time about Tiger, what it was like to work with him," Haney said in a telephone interview. "I felt like I had a front row seat to golf history. It just kind of chronicles a little bit of what I went through, what I dealt with, how I coached and the observations I made."

Haney began working with Woods at the Bay Hill Invitational in 2004. They parted ways a month after the 2010 Masters, where Woods made his return to golf after being exposed for multiple extramarital affairs that shattered his image and led to divorce.

Most of the people involved with Woods have signed a nondisclosure agreement. Haney said he signed no such thing — "I didn't even have a contract," he said — although he said the book was not intended to "take jabs at anyone."

Mark Steinberg, Woods' agent at Excel Sports Management, said he was aware of the book The Big

Miss but that Woods had not seen any excerpts and would have no comment.

Haney was asked whether he thought Woods will like it.

"If he reads it, I don't think it will be a book that bothers him. It's hard to say," Haney said.

"Anybody who reads it will think it's interesting, very fair and honest, and that's what I wanted to do. I was on that job for six years. There were 110 days a year I was with him. I stayed at his house for close to 30 days a year. You make a lot of observations."

The book will be released by Crown Archetype, part of the Crown Publishing Group at Random House, Inc. It is ► As for the serial adultery, Haney said he didn't know about it and doesn't delve into that chapter of Woods' life in the book, except for his return from the scandal after going nearly five months without competition.

Scandal

► "It's something you can't NOT talk about," Haney said. "My last tournament was the Masters, and that was his first tournament back from the scandal. I didn't know anything about the girls. That's not something I could specifically comment on. Everything I comment on is what I observed and the facts I knew. I didn't know anything about that."

scheduled to be published March 27 — one week before the Masters — and issued simultaneously in print and digital formats in the United States and Canada.

Haney wrote the book with Jaime Diaz of Golf Digest, whose coverage dates to when Woods was a teenager and Diaz played golf with Woods and his father. Diaz also spoke at the memorial service for Earl Woods. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BETTER TO DEAL WITH THINGS NOW, BEFORE THE RING

I spent the holidays with my boyfriend's family for the first time and the truth is that I absolutely hated them. But whenever I brought up the issues about them up to my boyfriend, he defended them (obviously), and now I'm starting to see that he shares some of their less-flattering traits. The former means you need to chill out, the latter

Also, if your boyfriend rarely sees them, then you can either try to avoid those occasions, or use them as material for your next therapy session.

Either way, the two of you will need to find a way to discuss this, because it won't be the last time you see things differently.

Andrea: Dear Turned Off,

They say that when you marry someone, you marry their family, too. Better that you see that side now and either reconcile or leave, than get into a real mess when there's a ring on your finger.

It doesn't really matter how close he is to his family, or how often you'd see them. This experience has allowed you to get to know your boyfriend a lot better.

The holidays have obviously raised some flags. The question now is: how important are these negative characteristics to you, compared to the ones that make you happy?

Be careful not to fall into the typical feminine trap of trying to change him. That's not fair to him. You can make an informed decision on what you want, and how flexible you are, which is completely fair.

When he heard how a new policy in California might adversely impact Alberta's oilsands, Nic Choquette-Levy became keenly interested in energy.

Levy, after completing an undergraduate degree in biomedical engineering and international relations, had taken an internship at the Canadian consulate in San Francisco.

There, he learned that California's new low-carbon fuel standard — aimed at reducing emissions that contribute to climate change — might also penalize future imports of carbon-intensive oil produced from the oilsands.

"I decided I wanted to do an interdisciplinary program that let me explore policy but also gave me some of the technical background," Levy says.

Levy became one of the first students in the interdisciplinary Energy and Environmental Systems graduate specialization, offered by the Institute for Sustainable Energy, Environment and Economy (ISEEE) at the University of Calgary.

"Finding solutions to real-world energy and environment problems requires a dynamic, interdisciplinary approach to research and learning," says David Layzell, ISEEE's executive director.

ISEEE's graduate program teaches students educated in one discipline, such as engineering or science, to integrate and apply the knowledge from many disciplines, "including those in the applied, natural and social sciences," Layzell says.

Students, working closely with ISEEE faculty and fellows, are trained to assess energy-environment issues from technical, economic and policy perspectives.

Graduates of ISEEE's three-year-old program are now working at the U.S. National Renewable Energy Laboratory in Colorado, the Catalonia Institute for Energy Research in Spain, and Carbon Engineering, a Calgary company. Others are doing post-doctoral work at Harvard University, University of Texas at Austin, and the University of Calgary.

Levy graduated in November 2011 with an MSc in chemical engineering with the Energy and Environmental Systems specialization. His thesis, which integrated life cycle assessment with cost-benefit analysis, explored ways to reduce greenhouse gas emissions in oilsands operations.

ISEEE's graduate program "trains you to become an effective decision maker," Levy says. "You are part of a unique community of faculty and students from a diverse set of disciplines and life experiences — all of which enriches your learning."

NEW WEBSITE AIMS TO SOLVE PROBLEM SURROUNDING FINDING DREAM CAREER

CareerBear.com, a new website, is the first in Canada to help people learn more about their dream careers and take steps to become what they want to be.

Many of us like to daydream — usually while at our current job — about other careers. Maybe you have thought about becoming a chef (you have always loved whipping up tasty improvisations for dinner), or a plumber (after realizing how much it cost to fix that leak) or a pilot (because pilots are cool).

Many of these careers and others are often shrouded in mystery. For example, most people don't know how much a flight attendant makes, or what kind of training is required to become a paralegal. And even if you search around online, it's unclear from most websites how to take it to the next step if you want to pursue that career.

CareerBear.com aims to solve this problem. First, you select a career — any of those mentioned above, plus more in the fields of skilled trades, IT, creative arts, business, etc. Then the site provides you not just with quick facts and articles about how to make your move, but also suggests programs and schools in your area.

For example, let's say you wanted to learn more about becoming a pharmacy assistant. The site's "quick facts" tell you that employment prospects are good (there are lots of open positions, plus aging demographics are expected to fuel demand for health services) and articles let you know more about the job and some required skills you may not have guessed (for example, pharmacy assistants apparently need "good manual dexterity").

In addition, CareerBear.com automatically detects your location and suggests relevant training opportunities closest to your city.

If you have ever thought about changing careers or want to learn more about a different path, the site is definitely worth checking out.

MANY CHOICES

CareerBear.com features more than 40 different careers, sorted either by name or by industry.

The site lists programs closest to major cities Vancouver, Edmonton, Calgary, Winnipeg, London, Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal and Halifax.

The site is totally free to use, supported by advertising.

Do your resolutions include finding a new career?

Explore what you want to be and how to get there.

Spiralling Blue Jackets fire coach

The last-place Columbus Blue Jackets are turning to a new coach in an effort to salvage something from a disastrous season.

Scott Arniel was fired following a 7-4 loss to Anaheim on Sunday night. Assistant Todd Richards takes over until the end of the season, when a full search will be conducted.

The Blue Jackets are 20 points out of playoff position with half a season to play.

"It's gone off the rails since then," Howson said Monday.

Once the GM made the decision to fire his coach, he flew to California on Saturday to deliver the news in person. Howson, who is undeniably on the hot seat himself, sought approval from his bosses to make the move and received it.

This was supposed to be a season of hope and change for the Blue Jackets. Centre Jeff Carter was acquired in a trade from Philadelphia and defenceman James Wisniewski inked a $33-million US, six-year contract.

But Wisniewski was suspended eight games stemming from an ugly pre-season hit and Carter fractured his right foot in October as Columbus stumbled out of the gate. The season was essentially lost by the time the team hit the 15-game mark at 2-12-1. THE CANADIAN PRESS

"He did everything he could. ... It just didn't work for him with this group."

► Canadiens forward David Desharnais shoots on Blues goalie Jaroslav Halak in St. Louis's 4-1 win late last season. Halak returns to face his old team in Montreal on Tuesday night.

Halak returns to his former habitat

► Canadiens' 2010 playoff hero returns to Bell Centre for first time with Blues ► 'I would look like an idiot not to put him in,' says St. Louis coach

You can still find people in Montreal wearing T-shirts with Halak written on a stop sign that were the hottest item in town when the Canadiens went on a playoff roll two seasons ago.

Some think the Canadiens made their worst move ever when they dealt Jaroslav Halak to the St. Louis Blues just weeks after the playoffs to give the goaltending job to talented but then-underperforming prospect Carey Price.

That debate will be re-ignited on Tuesday night when the two goalies go head-to-head as the Blues make their first visit in two seasons to the Bell Centre.

"I was hoping to get a game here and it's great that the coach (Ken Hitchcock) thought about me," Halak said Monday. "He's giving me the start and hopefully I can do my best and get a point or two."

"It's great I still have fans here. I appreciate it."

Brian Elliott was coming off a shutout in the Blues' win over Colorado Saturday. But Hitchcock didn't hesitate to announce Halak as his starter in Montreal.

Halak was king in Montreal in the spring of 2010.

He was spectacular as "I felt I learned a lot of lessons during that time."

CAREY PRICE ON PLAYING BACK UP BEHIND JAROSLAV HALAK DURING MONTREAL'S 2010 PLAYOFF RUN

Montreal came back from a 3-1 deficit in the opening round to oust first-place Washington.

Then they knocked off the favoured Pittsburgh Penguins to reach the conference final for the first time since their last Stanley Cup triumph in 1993, only to fall to the Philadelphia Flyers.

When the playoffs ended, Canadiens management was stuck between two talented young goalies.

They chose Price, and wasted no time sending Halak to St. Louis for prospects Lars Eller and Ian Schultz, causing an outcry heading into the 2010-11 season.

They were humbling times for Price and he was a fitter, better goaltender the next season as the starter.

"Being able to watch for a while and seeing what I needed to do to be successful at that time really helped," said Price. "Being able to sit on the bench and watch probably benefited me." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Senators preview

TV: SNET

The Senators (22-15-6) travel to Pittsburgh (21-15-4), where the Penguins hope to halt a four-game losing streak. The last time Pittsburgh won was on Dec. 27. While Sidney Crosby (concussion-like symptoms) remains out indefinitely, Jordan Staal (knee) was injured on Friday and James Neal (broken foot) was hurt on Saturday. Both are expected to be out for weeks. Evgeni Malkin scored his first goal in six games on Saturday in a 3-1 loss to New Jersey.

Hall of Fame nod makes sense to Larkin

Barry Larkin has been elected to baseball's Hall of Fame.

The former Cincinnati Reds shortstop received 495 votes (86 per cent) in balloting announced Monday by the Baseball Writers' Association of America, well above the necessary 75 per cent. Larkin was on the ballot for the third time after falling 75 votes short last year.

He will be inducted July 22 in Cooperstown along with the late Ron Santo, elected last month by the Veterans Committee.

"It's just amazing," Larkin said in an interview on MLB Network. "Last year I just started to smell it a little bit."

"The first year I didn't even think it was fathomable, to be quite honest."

Jack Morris was next with 382 votes (67 per cent), missing by 48 votes on his 13th try but up sharply from 54 per cent last year. The former Toronto Blue Jays pitcher has two chances left on the BBWAA ballot.

Playing from 1986 to '04, Larkin hit .295 with 198 home runs, 960 RBIs, 2,340 hits and 379 stolen bases. He won the 1995 NL MVP award, three Gold Gloves and the 1990 World Series. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

After Tebow, many questions

► Banged-up Steelers still reeling following shocking loss to Broncos ► Aging defence may require roster moves

Mike Tomlin wouldn't change a thing. Probably.

The Pittsburgh Steelers coach said Monday he'd defend Broncos quarterback Tim Tebow the same way if given another chance, even after Tebow burned the defending AFC champions for an 80-yard touchdown pass on the first play of overtime to lift Denver to a stunning 29-23 victory.

"Obviously they made some nice plays on us and in hindsight you would analyze it, but your options are limited in terms of how you attack them," Tomlin said.

The Steelers crowded the line of scrimmage and dared Tebow to beat the NFL's top-ranked defence with his sometimes erratic left arm. Tebow obliged by throwing for 316 yards and a pair of long touchdowns, including the dart Demaryius Thomas turned into the quickest overtime score in NFL playoff history.

"They made a nice football play," Tomlin said.

One that sent the Steelers into what could be an eventful off-season sooner than they hoped.

A year after falling just short in the Super Bowl, the Steelers went 12-5 despite a rash of injuries affecting every position. Even if Pittsburgh had somehow prevailed in

Denver, there's no telling how many healthy bodies would have been left to play on Saturday night in New England.

Left tackle Max Starks and nose tackle Casey Hampton both sustained knee injuries that could require surgery. Defensive end Brett Keisel's groin acted up and linebacker LaMarr Woodley's strained right hamstring remains balky more than two months after tweaking it.

Those injuries don't include quarterback Ben Roethlisberger's sprained left ankle, safety Troy Polamalu's tender right calf or centre Doug Legursky's aching left shoulder.

Cornerback Ike Taylor, who let Thomas get by him for the game winning TD, will get a chance at redemption next season after signing a four-year contract in the pre-season. So will Polamalu and Woodley, who both agreed to extensions before the regular season kicked off.

They're among the few certainties on a still formidable but aging defence that started seven players in their 30s on Sunday.

Tomlin allowed that "change is a part of this thing" but the Steelers will do what they can to keep the core group together.

There are fewer questions on offence, though the unit underperformed at times, finishing 22nd in the league in points per game. Roethlisberger played through thumb and foot injuries behind an offensive line that didn't find any cohesion until the second half of the season. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today's horoscope

♈ Aries March 21-April 20

You may find it difficult to focus today. But that's OK. Variety is good for you.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21

People you live and work with will have you running in all directions today. Know when to say "no".

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21

According to the planets, you are reading too much into what is really a perfectly normal situation.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 You need to find a way to let off steam without turning people against you. Yes, OK, you have a right to be angry but you also need to think about your reputation.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 23

What annoys you are trivial things that are simply not worth getting worked up about. Ignore insignificant issues today.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22

People expect you to speak your mind and you certainly won't let them down over the next 24 hours.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

A breakthrough may be closer than you realize.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22

Avoid getting involved in disputes that have nothing to do with you.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21

You may be tempted to place your trust in a friend of a friend, simply because they act and sound so confident, but is that such a good idea?

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20

Not everyone takes life as seriously as you, so don't be surprised if something you live or work with fails to see the gravity of your current situation.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18

Someone, somewhere is sure to feel the edge of your tongue today.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20.

Don't get uptight if someone whose support you can usually rely on fails to help you today. They have their own life and their own issues. SALLY BROMPTON
